

Home

Explore

Library

 Account Settings

Soundscape

Recent Playlists

Playlist 1
Tags: Anime, Pop

Playlist 2
Tags: Korean, Pop

Playlist 3
Tags: Chinese, OST

↺ ↻

Playing Song 1 from Playlist 1

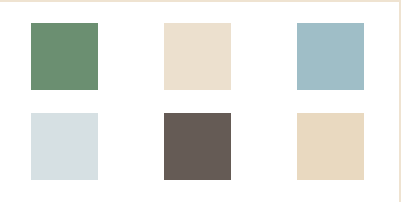

⏮

⏸

⏭

🔊

🔧

=====Hello Kevin!=====

current email: exampleEmail1@mail.com

new email: change

previous password:

new password:

confirm password: change

Choose an image

snapchat

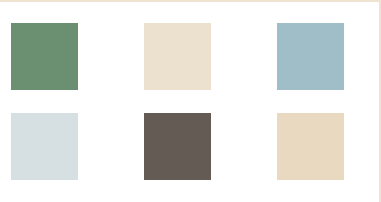

twitter

instagram

tiktok

Two Views

After creating the two desktop views for this week, I realized how difficult it is to actually create a website that flows well and doesn't look generic. I tried to include an easy to use floating play bar similar to that of Soundcloud, as well as a recent playlist feature on the home page. Additionally, I've included a smaller version of our explore page on the side of the page so users are able to get started with the websites' features from the home page itself. I do feel that the page has a bit too much white space, which is also apparent in the account page that I made. I feel like the white space on the account page might be fine, because there isn't much that needs to be on the account page to begin with. For the home page though, I was thinking of adding a few other features like search-by-tag or favorite songs. I did add the favorite songs, but I removed it because it made the page look really cluttered. Another issue I ran into when designing the home page was the alignment of text and circles for the exploration section. When I hover the elements, they appear to be aligned, but when I look at the page, the text feels like it isn't aligned properly. Overall, I feel like I'm pretty satisfied with how the designs turned out. They're a bit lacking in content, but I think having a simple and easy to use website is nice as well.