To be honest, I'm pretty happy with my design here. The idea of having a relatively constant background and text colour while allowing the accent colours to switch between two heavily contrasting options to represent the two different pages seems like a pretty good idea.

The simple toggle switch going between them might not be the greatest idea, unless the way that we switch between pages is a swipe in the same direction of the switch, but even then it's a ton of movement at once. The only other thing I think could use a change is the amount and font of the text on screen. It's not too bad; the font is simple and doesn't clutter the screen too much, but it has no identity. Additionally, the volume of text however could contribute to a feeling of over clutter, so making the biography areas of each profile smaller could be a good idea.
